

AUTOMOBILE RUNS AMUCK; ONE MAN FATALY INJURED

J. Paul Miller on Sidewalk When Hit by Machine. Police at Sea.

The police are searching every garage in the city today for a machine that ran amuck on Pennsylvania avenue at dusk last evening, disregarding other vehicles, pedestrians, and a few obstructions like curbing and trees. G. Paul Miller, a stenographer living at 1014 15th street northwest, who was run down by the machine, is still in a semi-conscious condition at Emergency Hospital, suffering from concussion of the brain. Miller was on the sidewalk when he was run down, and he does not yet know what struck him.

The car that created all the excitement began careering on Pennsylvania avenue just west of Ninth street. It struck a machine driven by C. W. Scott, of 715 Thirteenth street northwest, in front of 925 Pennsylvania avenue, and putting on power continued west at a rapid pace. After crossing Tenth street it turned into the curb in front of the Franklin statue, jumped this obstruction, hit Miller, hurling him fifteen feet, crashed into a tree, and running into D street continued west at a still faster pace.

Machine and driver are unidentified, though five bystanders aver that they saw the number. Each of the five numbers is different, and the police discounted them all. The only known damage to the machine is the loss of a brass hub cap picked up by the police. A bicyclist gave chase, but turned back when the machine showed symptoms of turning and chasing him up a tree.

A colored man, driving a heavy touring car, ran the machine into a heavy hitching post at Seventh and D streets southwest, yesterday afternoon to avoid running down children playing in the street.

Clara Livingstone, of 707 Randolph street, driving his car out of Irving street into Fourteenth street, collided with a machine driven by Percy Grady, a chauffeur, bound south on Fourteenth street. Both machines were struck by a car before they could be dislodged. No one was hurt, and the damage was comparatively slight.

NINE CASES OF BEER TAKEN IN POLICE RAID

Eighth Precinct Men Find Un-licensed Bars in 'Cowntown.'

Men of No. 8 police precinct are sitting dry mouthed about the station house today, casting glances upon an array of bottles that would do credit to any well-stocked bar. Captain Doyle started a crusade in downtown this morning and raided four unlicensed bars. One of them was of the perambulating variety. Cowntown is the section between Seventh and Ninth streets, north of Florida avenue. Several complaints have been received lately that liquor was being sold on Sunday.

This morning a squad of men was sent out, some in uniform and some in plain clothes. They returned a little before 10 o'clock with nine cases of beer and three Smiths, two masculine and one feminine, all colored, and Mary E. Bell, also colored. Each was charged with running and operating an unlicensed bar, and each was held in $1,000 bond for appearance in court.

CAMPAIGN OPENED TO RID NATION OF INDUSTRIAL POISON

Legislation Is Sought to Stamp Out Use of Dangerous Processes.

A nation-wide effort to stamp out the use of processes which are known to result in extensive industrial poisonings is to be made by the American Medical Association working in conjunction with the association for labor legislation. The controlling and elimination of cases of industrial poisoning is a new movement in the United States. It was not until 1911 that the first steps were taken to ascertain the number of deaths annually due to poison contracted in industries, such as the lead, oxide, paint, and match industries. Statistics showed that in one year there were more than 200 deaths in the United States directly attributable to such poisoning. Since then the United States is following the lead of European countries that have legislated to safeguard the workmen in dangerous industries. The Department of Commerce and Labor is distributing a bulletin giving for the first time the English translations of all the industrial poisons and poisonings, compiled by the International Association for Labor Legislation.

All Wanted the Negative.
"You should have been to the debating society last night," remarked the subordinate to his neighbor as they ran for the station.
"It almost ended in a riot. You see the subject for the next debate is 'Resolved, can a man run a law mow at 4 o'clock in the morning and still be a Christian,' and everybody wanted the negative side."

How She Pulled Through.
"They say Bill's wife is going to get well."
"So I heard."
"But you didn't hear it all. Old Dr. Dosem fixed up a last hope, hit-or-miss prescription and told Bill to get it filled at the drug store. Well, when he got there some fellows he knew was talking Bill lined and clean forgot 'bout the prescription, and didn't get home for two hours. An' while he was gone Maudie passed the crisis and begun to mend—but it was a close call an' politics wuz th' only thing that saved her."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Court-Martialed.
"I told you that Nibbs was foolish to be courting so many girls."
"How did it turn out?"
"As you might expect. His expenses were so heavy that he got behind with his board and had to marry his landlady."

An Actor.
A group of stage people in a favorite local resort of their profession were swapping anecdotes about "play-actors." One said: "I knew an actor who fell off a steamboat at night. There was great confusion on board. The searchlight was turned round and round in an effort to find the man. He came up for the third time just as the light struck him, and, from force of habit, raised himself and delivered a ceremonious bow. Then he grabbed the life-preserver and was hauled to safety."—Newark Star.

Under Suspicion.
"Your prejudice against Mr. Young-rake is entirely unreasonable, pa," protested the willful young heiress. "There's a great deal in that young man."
"Yes," replied her shrewd old father, "and sometimes I'm afraid it's a great deal of the stuff I smelted on his breath the other day."—Catholic Standard and Times.

The Motive.
It was an evening party. A young man with a tall collar and pale hair was reciting a poem. He had ground out forty-seven stanzas—and the end was not yet.
"What's going on?" whispered the guest who had just come in.
"Rhyme is letting out his latest poem," answered the pessimistic person.
"What's the subject—the motive?" queried the late comer.
"I have forgotten the subject," replied the P. P., "but I suspect the motive must be revenge."—Ideas.

Getting Even.
The doctor made me show him my tongue and it cost me $2; but I got even.
How?
In a poker game last night I made him show me his hand, and it cost him $5.—Boston Herald.
